Concept Note

The world is going through one of the toughest times in the history of humanity. Thanks to the development of various technological innovations, such as the Internet, people can imitate normal life while sitting indoors. However, this brings about new issues and challenges, especially with the security and privacy concerns of the users of these technologies. For example, recently, a popular video conferencing tool was hacked and attacked, resulting in leaking sensitive information. Due to the reduced physical interactions, most of us are spending a significant amount of time over the Internet and various social media, and therefore, it is of paramount importance to keep that cyberspace secured. In this webinar, we would listen to various researchers and experts from academia, research institutions, and industries, who have contributed to this very concern. We would be introduced to various security concerns in our day to day lives and what measures we should take to tackle these challenges, especially amid this global outbreak and similar pandemics. The lectures in the webinar do not require any specific knowledge about cyber or computer security, and the targeted audience is anybody who uses the Internet and social media.

We cordially invite you to this webinar to brainstorm on the usefulness of cyber security in a changed world after Covid-19!
